ELECTION BOARDS KEPT ON THE JUMP

Voting in Seymour Began Early and 1,435 Ballots Were Cast By 2:30 O'clock.

PARTY WORKERS ARE BUSY

Balloting Has Been Done Without Confusion and No Trouble Has Been Experienced in City.

Although the weather indications have not been the most favorable for a heavy vote, the indications this afternoon at the various polling places were that a record vote would be cast in Seymour today. Reports from other precincts in the county were received by the Republican that the vote was unusually heavy and that in many places over half of the total vote was polled before noon.

While considerable interest has been shown in the election, the voting has been carried on quietly and very little confusion was reported at any of the polls. At a few places voters who failed to register made an effort to vote, but of course, were informed that they were not qualified voters and were not permitted to cast their ballot. No disturbances have been experienced during the day.

The voting began early this morning and at several of the precincts when the polls opened at 6 o'clock there were a number of voters ready to cast their ballots. All the parties have their workers on the grounds and are making an effort to get out the full vote. Because of the unusual interest in the election the voting was heavier this morning than usual and has continued good throughout the day.

It is noticeable that most of the voters did not linger long inside the polls, which is taken to indicate that the majority of them are voting the straight ticket. It is not believed there will be many scratched ballots. The county chairmen of all three parties are pleased with the vote that is being cast and declare that it is indicative of the party's strength.

The number of votes polled in the various precincts in Jackson townships at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon were 1,435 as follows:

Precinct No. 1.....	166
Precinct No. 2.....	112
Precinct No. 3.....	101
Precinct No. 4.....	139
Precinct No. 5.....	148
Precinct No. 6.....	137
Precinct No. 7.....	138
Precinct No. 8.....	135
Precinct No. 9.....	197

CAME TO BLOWS

Officer Thompson and Ben Furman Have Some Trouble.

An argument which ended with blows took place this morning between Officer Philip Thompson and Benjamin Furman, colored, near the B. & O. S-W. crossing on Indianapolis avenue. It seems that the trouble was the result of personal differences. The men had an exciting round during which Furman received several blows.

It is said that Furman's father and the policeman had a little trouble a few weeks ago, but that the difficulty was supposed to have been settled. At that time Furman hit Thompson with a piece of coal and that the latter hit him lightly. Furman's son has been away from the city for several months, but returned this morning and upon hearing of the trouble approached Thompson near the railroad crossing.

Furman wanted to know what the trouble was and Thompson replied that he did not know, whereupon Furman began to talk and the officer resented the words. It is said that the colored man was given warning to go on his way, but before he got started the fight began. There was some talk this morning, that Furman intended to swear out an affidavit, but nothing has been done along this line today.

TAXES DELINQUENT.

Additional Ten Per Cent. Will Be Added Now.

Monday, November 4th, was the last day for paying taxes, and all those which were not settled before the county treasurer's office closed Monday night, are regarded as delinquent and the additional ten per cent. will be added according to the requirements of the law. For the past few days Treasurer Price and his office employees have been busy receiving taxes and issuing receipts.

The great majority of tax payers postpone the payment of the taxes until the last few days and as a result the work was heavy in the treasurer's office before the time expired. There was a considerable rush Monday, and while many payments were made there were quite a few of the property owners in the county who failed to send in their money in time. Unless the delinquent taxes are paid within a specified time the property will be sold to satisfy the same.

Ada was taken sick a few weeks ago and had been in a serious condition for some time. A son of Mr. and Mrs. Pennington is also seriously ill with typhoid, although his condition is somewhat improved.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the family home. Burial at River-view.

SALOONS WILL NOT BE OPEN TONIGHT

Retail Liquor Dealers Present The Question To the Mayor and Chief of Police.

CONFLICT IN THE STATUTES

Officials Upon Legal Advice Hold That Intoxicating Liquor Cannot Be Sold After Polls Close.

A perplexing legal question involving the right to retail intoxicating liquors after six o'clock tonight, was presented this morning by the saloon men, to Mayor Allen Swope and Chief of Police Abell. There is no doubt but that the law is clear that it is illegal to sell liquor while the polls are open, but because of a conflict in the law there was some question as to whether such sales could be made after the polls were closed.

Section 27 of the Procter law provides that no sales shall be made upon election days while the polls are open, and the question would be easily decided if another statute did not provide that all election days were legal holidays, and it is illegal to sell liquor upon legal holidays. The two statutes are in conflict, and the saloon men, not wishing to take any risks, ask the officers to settle the question.

The saloon keepers desired to open their places of business at six o'clock if it could be legally done for a large number of men will be on the street tonight to hear the returns and there would doubtless be a flourishing business in that line. However, it was quite a risk to open the saloons for business if the sales should be illegal.

The Mayor and Chief of Police looked into the question and sought legal advice. After some discussion it was decided that the law was not plain upon the point, but as the statutes provided that all saloons should be closed on legal holidays, that provision will be followed. As a result the men who had expected that they would be able to purchase liquor, will be disappointed.

The officers are making every effort to enforce the law and declare that they kept a close watch upon the various saloons today and would continue to guard them tonight.

There have been very few intoxicated men on the street today and it is said that all the saloons are obeying the law.

PART OF SKELETON REPORTED FOUND

Supposed to Be That of Henry Runger, Who Mysteriously Disappeared Over Two Years Ago.

SEARCH IS NOT SUCCESSFUL

Nothing Has Been Seen of the Man After He Received Money For His Farm.

What is believed to be part of the skeleton of Henry Runger, who suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from his home near Surprise about two years ago, was reported to have been found in a woods in Salt Creek township Tuesday afternoon. Several years before the missing man disappeared he met with an accident while operating a corn shredder and one of his hands was torn off just above the wrist. It was stated that one of the bones found was that of an arm from which the hand was missing.

When this fact was made known several of Mr. Runger's relatives endeavored to locate the part of the skeleton at the point where it was reported to have been found, but were unsuccessful in finding them. Inquiry was made from several persons who were reported to have discovered the part of the skeleton, but they stated that they had not seen them. A search was made in the neighborhood where they were reported to have been found, and if the skeleton was located it is probable that it had been removed before the search by the relatives was made.

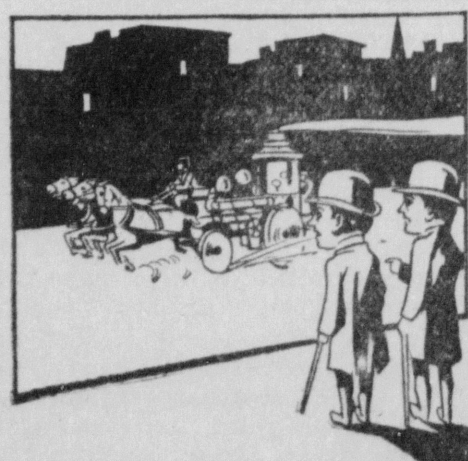

Mr. Runger disappeared from his home about two years ago and has not been seen nor heard from since. He was employed as a farm laborer and worked at various places, but never before did he remain away from home or keep his whereabouts unknown for more than a month or so at a time. He has a number of relatives living near Surprise and some of them believe that he has met with foul play or he would have returned home long ago. It is stated that a few days before he disappeared he sold some land located near Surprise and received several hundred dollars in payment. It is stated that the transaction was made in the presence of quite a number of bystanders who witnessed the payment of the money to him. About the same time he sold his farm he received a small amount of money from other sources, and it was generally known that he had this money upon his person.

For about a week or ten days after the farm was sold he was seen about his home but suddenly disappeared and has not been heard from since.

The Republicans, Democrats and Progressives have arranged with the manager of the Majestic Theatre to receive election returns at the Opera house tonight. In this way all who wish to hear the returns will have a comfortable seat and warm room. A special wire has been run to the Majestic Theatre today and as the returns are received, they will be thrown on the screen. Between the bulletins Mr. Eagleston will run his regular picture show for the entertainment of the crowd while waiting for returns to come in. Extra films have been secured for tonight, so that there will be ample entertainment while waiting for bulletins. The regular admission fee of 10c will be charged which will include all the picture shows and all the returns tonight. After the returns begin to come in rapidly, the pictures will be taken off and nothing but returns will be thrown on the screen.

Because of the large crowds who are anxious to hear the returns, the Republican office will be unable to accommodate the people, who wish to hear the returns, although we would be glad to do so if we had room. Arrangements have been made, however, to answer all telephone calls from the Republican office. The Seymour Mutual Telephone Company has installed four extra telephones for this purpose and we will be glad to give you the latest news by telephone if you call 42.

CLOSING SPEECHES

Republicans Held Big Rally at Majestic Theatre Monday.

The campaign in Seymour was closed Monday with a big Republican meeting and rally at the Majestic theatre which was attended by hundreds of people. The speeches were given by Judge O. H. Montgomery and Judge John M. Lewis, who spoke upon the issues of the campaign.

The speakers delivered excellent addresses and were followed with the close attention of the audience. They urged the voters to think seriously before voting and pointed out that a democratic victory has the grave possibility of a panic such as was experienced in 1894 under the Cleveland administration. They appealed to the good judgment of the voters to vote for the republican candidate, William Howard Taft, because of his record as president and because of his ability to give the people a good, honest, clean businesslike administration. John H. Kamman presided over the meeting and introduced the speakers.

Election Returns.

The Majestic has made arrangements to receive the election returns from all parts of the United States this evening by special wire. The instrument will be placed upon the stage, and the bulletins will be issued promptly. Several extra reels of film have been secured. The best place in the city to get the returns promptly and accurately. Advertisement.

HEAVY VOTE CAST IN ALL COUNTIES

Reports From All Parts of the State Say That Voters Are Registering Straight Tickets.

3,172 PRECINCTS IN STATE

Indications In Illinois Are That A Record Vote Will Be Cast—May Reach 1,200,000.

Indianapolis, Nov. 5.—Fair weather and the great interest taken in the election resulted in a heavy vote in all counties of Indiana early today. Dispatches say that in the counties where machines are used the voting averaged from one to one and a third votes a minute. It thus became apparent early in the morning that there was little scratching, the voters preferring to register straight tickets than to take the chance of confusing themselves by manipulating the machines in order to scratch.

Few places reported any confusion as a result of the new registration law. The voters had been instructed to remember their registration numbers and call them out when they gave their names in the polling booth. In cases where the voter did not recall his number the election officers supplied it without loss of time.

There are 3,172 voting precincts in Indiana. Only fourteen counties are using machines.

Indications in Illinois today were that a record vote would be cast. The weather was clear and warm. That the state vote would total more than a million was estimated by political headquarters, and that it might reach 1,250,000 many observers did not hesitate to predict.

Besides the twenty-nine presidential electors to which the state is entitled, Illinois today voted for state officers, including Governor, twenty-seven members of the congress, twenty-five members of the state senate and 153 members of the state house of representatives.

World's Greatest Nesting Place

OF THE MULTI-MILLIONAIRES

NEW YORK—The greatest, most luxurious and complete development of country life that is to be found in America is on Long Island. One part of Long Island particularly surpasses all the rest in the number and magnificence of its great estates. This is the northern half of Nassau county. The region which extends from Great Neck to Cold Spring Harbor and from the sound south nearly to the main line of the Long Island railroad contains greater wealth than any portion of the earth's surface of a similar size outside of a town or city. It is within 30 or 40 minutes of Manhattan by rail. In a well-driven motor car one may pass from one boundary to the other of this section, north or south or east or west, in from 30 to 25 minutes. In this neighborhood more than 200 persons of great wealth have given an expression of their accumulated riches in the largest number of beautiful country estates in America. All this has come about within the last 25 or 30 years.

This part of Long Island is of great natural beauty. It has the highest hills, some rising more than 400 feet above the sea. There are several splendid deep water havens without rocks, reefs or shoals, where the largest of steam yachts may lie at anchor. Hempstead, Oyster Bay and Cold Spring Harbors have been famous since the days of the Indians. The anchorage of the New York Yacht club, in the East river, can be reached from them easily by steam yachts or power boats in from an hour to an hour and a quarter. This region has the greatest mileage of stone roads of any section of equal area in the United States. These country highways have lost nothing of their rustic beauty by being macadamized, and motoring over them is a delight. They are so smooth that the hilly nature of the country offers no impediment to the autoist's enjoyment. In this section also are found the finest trees and the richest soil. A greater variety of plants and trees can be raised to perfection there than anywhere else in America. It is no wonder, therefore, that not only the very rich have selected this region for their country homes or that those who are only fairly well-to-do have been quick to see its advantages and build their houses there. The developers of suburban real estate also have found this one of their most attractive fields.

Select Club Land.

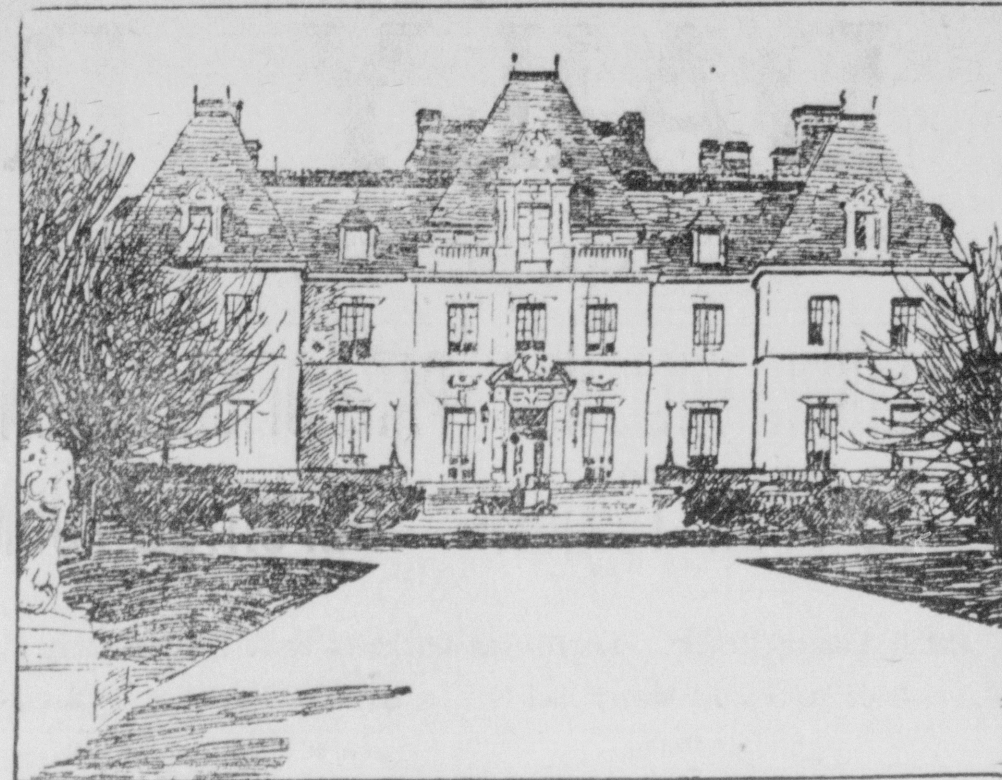

This section, too, is where club life reaches perfection. There are clubs for land sports and clubs for water sports. The Meadow Brook Hunt club is one of the most famous of the former. This is the finest fox-hunting region in America. The Nassau Country club and half a dozen golf clubs cover many acres and afford all the enjoyments of out-of-door life. The Piping Rock Country club is the largest and newest of all, and probably is the most magnificently appointed organization of its kind in the Western Hemisphere. In addition to these there are fishing clubs, gun clubs, automobile clubs—in fact, a man may find there almost any kind of club for outdoor sports that he can think of. The horse shows that are held in the open air every autumn attract a larger attendance from the society folk than the annual event in Madison Square garden.

This part of Long Island is, more than any other region of the United States, like rural England. There are sleepy old villages that look out upon green, undulating swards like those of Kent or Devonshire. The houses on the country estates of America's most famous millionaires stand out like white dots on the slopes of green. The towers and turrets of others loom up clear cut against the horizon. The clustered estates practically touch elbows and cover less territory than an ordinary Texas ranch. It is like baronial Europe, only the castles are nearer together.

Perfect Country Houses.

Some of these country houses—many of them, in fact—are veritable palaces. Broad avenues overarched by splendid trees lead up to them. Flower-bordered walks give brilliant touches of color to the view. All about are English hedges, with well-trimmed boxes, globes and arches of privet and arbor vitae. There are parks and pleasure grounds, peacocks and balustrades. The scene has none of the gorgeous theatrical setting of Newport. Its beauty is natural and artistic. Fabulous sums have been expended in this region in improving upon nature. Great as the wealth is that is represented, it does not obtrude itself unpleasantly. The casual visitor receives the impression that the people who own and dwell in the palaces have learned not only how to amass riches, but to live.

A good many of the wealthy folk who inhabit this beautiful region are of the second or third generation of millionaires. They have none of the trials or worries of money getting. They are concerned more with the enjoyment of life under sunny skies, with every accessory that money can buy. But there are many others who are still busy heaping up their great fortunes still higher. These folk find the same relaxation and rest on their country estates at night and week-ends that the small business man does who lives in sight of them in his cottage.

The season of the greatest social activity in this widespread colony of millionaires is the autumn, but many of the owners of the great estates open their houses in April and stay there much of the time until after Thanksgiving. Some spend a few weeks in Europe during the summer, but by early in September there is hardly a house whose family is away. They are all very neighborly. The automobile has moved other splendid places of residence on Long Island close up to this one. It is only an hour or so's motoring from one fine section to another on the south shore or out toward the eastern end of the island. Nothing is thought of riding 50 miles of an afternoon or evening for a game of bridge or for a dance. Of late years the automobile has become as much a necessity as the horse used to be. Some of these rich residents on Long Island have a dozen motor cars constantly in commission, and a few have as many as 25 or 30. One man is said to own 50. A good many of the dwellers in the Nassau county district travel back and forth by automobile from their homes to business. Others whose homes are near the Sound, make the trip during the summer months by yacht.

Founded by A. T. Stewart.

The nucleus of this colony of millionaires was near Westbury and dates from the founding of the Meadow Brook club in 1881. As far back as 1866 A. T. Stewart bought 9,000 acres of land near Garden City. At that time his purchase was regarded as the height of a rich man's folly and the farmers were glad to sell their possessions at from $40 to $60 an acre. Later when the Meadow Brook club became popular, land began to rise, slowly at first, but subsequently with vertiginous rapidity. The original settlers—Quakers for the most part—were slow to sell, but little by little they parted with their homestead farms which were combined and laid out in vast estates for the enjoyment of those who built the palaces that replaced the low-roofed rambling houses. Today $10,000 an acre is asked for many desirable tracts of land in this region. This is especially the case where the land has been allowed to retain all its natural beauty and where the groves of great trees have remained untouched by the ax.

Much Owed to Pratt.

Charles Pratt, the Standard Oil millionaire who died ten or fifteen years ago, probably did more than any one else to make popular this splendid region in northern Nassau county. Some twenty-five or thirty years ago he bought a large estate at Glen Cove and spent a great deal of time and money in beautifying and adding to it. He was the first really large buyer of land in this region. Later some other rich men, appreciative of the delights of country life, on Long Island, bought other hundreds of acres. Year after year the colony of congenial people of wealth increased, but it received its greatest impetus and has had its largest growth since the motor car became practicable as a means of sure and swift locomotion. Indeed, the automobile is the principal thing that has made this millionaires' colony possible and has placed it within easy reach of similar communities in other parts of the island. The Pratt estate is still one of the show places of that part of Long Island. The six sons of Charles Pratt have built six magnificent country houses on the great property that their father bought and have still further developed its beauties. Among the finest places in this region are Henry Davidson's, at Peacock Point, Glen Cove; Howard Gould's, Harvey Ladew's, H. Bramhall Gilbert's and Dr. Satterwhite's, all at Great Neck; Colgate Hoyt's, on Center Island; E. D. Morgan's, in the Wheatley hills, and the estates of James Byrne, W. D. Guthrie, W. J. Matheson, Clarence Mackay and J. P. Morgan, Jr.

The Mackay place, at Roslyn, is typical of what wealth and taste have accomplished in this neighborhood. It is more than 600 acres in extent. The mansion is on the top of a wooded hill, 230 feet above the level of the road where it passes the lodge gates. On clear days ships on the ocean can be seen from there, and the nearer, daily panorama of Long Island sound. The big buildings in Manhattan are within view, and at night the lights of Broadway are visible from the housetop. There are ten miles of driveways and four miles of footpaths. The management of the place is as carefully organized as any big business enterprise. There are a number of different departments, each with its head, all under the supervision of a general manager, who reports direct to the owner. An expert accountant comes quarterly and audits the books.

FATHER'S QUOIT HIT CHILD

Four-Year-Old Effie Griffith Runs Toward Her Parent as He Pitches and Is Dying.

Washington, Pa.—Four-year-old Effie Griffith is dying in a hospital at Wellsburg, W. Va., over the state line from Independence, Washington county, from injuries received when she was struck in the face by a quoit pitched by her father in a game. The accident occurred at the Bellevue camp-meeting grounds at Independence.

Little Effie was watching her father, D. B. Griffith, and several other men pitching, a number of children being some distance from the court. The child approached the danger line, unseen by any of the contestants, who were excited over the close match. Just as Griffith pitched the heavy quoit the little girl darted toward him with a cry of "Papa!" on her lips.

The horrified parent stood petrified and saw the heavy quoit crash into his child's face, hurling her several feet and rendering her unconscious. When picked up she was apparently dead. Her nose and adjacent bones in the face and cheek were shattered and her skull fractured. She was rushed to the hospital and four physicians were summoned from here and Wheeling by the wealthy father. The child, however, has little chance for recovery.

Luckless Age, This.

"No'm," said Aunt Phenile with conviction, "times ain't as lucky as what dey used to be."

"How do you account for it," asked her mistress.

"Well'm, the way I figures it, dese automobiles is most to blame."

"Automobiles? What have they got to do with it?"

"Well'm, horseshoes has always been good luck, ain't dey? And four leaf clovers is good luck, ain't dey? Automobiles has drove de horses out o' business—consequently, dey ain't as many horseshoes lyin' around with luck on 'em, and farmers ain't raisin' as much clover as dey used to. Why, I had to send to the country to get a horseshoe to nail over my bed room do'."

Their Romance.

"He loves me, he loves me not," said Maud Muller, as she went through the garden picking potato bugs off the potato plants.

"He loves me."

She picked a potato bug.

"He loves me not."

She gathered another potato bug. "A thrifty girl, forsooth," declared the judge. "Instead of playing that game with daisy petals, she plays it with potato bugs."

He proposed, they were married, and if the recall does not go into effect they will doubtless live happily.

Ambition.

"I wish I could get out of this town. It's no place for a fellow with any ambition."

"Why, I had an idea that it was a pretty good town. It has a higher average of successful men than almost any other place that I know of."

"Oh, that may be, but see how the poor devils have had to work for their success."

Well Worth Catching.

"Anything worth catching in that lake?" asked the young man who had just arrived.

The hotel proprietor matched his question with another.

"See that girl in the red bathing suit?"

"Yes."

"She ought to be worth catching. They say she's worth 150,000 plunks."

This Is Terrible.

"This summer resort reminds me of Sunday morning."

"So quiet?"

"Not that. The belles are peeling, don't you know?"

Then the arm of the sea curled around the sandy waste.

"I see; then he lost his head."

LONG CAMPAIGN NEARING CLOSE

In a Few Hours We Shall Know the Result.

BATTLE OF BALLOTS TODAY

Rarely Have the People of This Country Witnessed a More Spirited Political Contest Than That Which Today Is Being Decided at the Nation's Polling Places—Great Triangular Fight Has Had Many Elements of Interest.

BY ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Nov. 5.—(Special)—Silently the ballots are falling today in every part of the Union save here in Washington, the seat of government and for the next four years the home of the man who will be chosen by those ballots as president of the United States.

In a few hours we shall know the result of one of the most interesting campaigns in years and in which for the first time forty-eight states composing the contiguous territory of the United States take part.

There are three contending and possible candidates in the field, any one of whom might be chosen, making this the first three-cornered presidential contest within the memory of present voters. Each ticket is a factor in the contest, as the votes polled for the so-called third ticket may decide the election.

Also Electing a Congress.

Second only to the election of the president is the election of a congress, especially as the result today may change the political complexion of the senate, which has been for so many years Republican. In thirty states legislatures will be elected which will choose senators. In three—Illinois, Idaho and Colorado—two senators are to be elected. The Illinois vacancy was caused by voting Lorimer out of the senate and the Idaho vacancy by the death of Senator Heyburn. The Colorado vacancy has existed for two years because the last legislature did not choose a successor to Senator Hughes.

The states in which senators are to be chosen are: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia and Wyoming. Maine has held her election and will elect a Republican in place of Gardner, Democrat. In many of the states the primary elections have already settled the senatorship.

The new house of representatives to be elected will be composed of 435 members, the largest ever known. Of these two in Vermont and four in Maine have already been elected.

Many Governors to Be Elected.

Were it not for the overshadowing interest in the presidential contest the country would be considering the state elections where many governors are being chosen. The states electing governors today are Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

In many of these states the contests have been spirited and interesting because of local conditions. This is especially true in New York, where there are three tickets in the field and each claiming success.

All Eyes on the Presidency.

But no matter what other contests there may be it is the presidential election which attracts attention and brings out the largest vote. The people may be apathetic in other years even when they should be interested, but the choice of a chief magistrate never fails to arouse the voters. Nearly everybody is interested in the great quadrennial event.

Every presidential election has its particular feature of interest which makes it different from all others that have gone before, although we are bound to acknowledge that for years past there has been considerable repetition so far as results are concerned. But this year we have something different, something that has not occurred before, and consequently all eyes will be turned on the returns which relate to the presidency.

Taft-Roosevelt Tussle.

The fact that two men who have been elected as Republicans to the presidency are contending for the election today, were contending for the Republican nomination in June and may defeat each other for the big prize, is enough in itself to make the day which ends the contest remarkable. Roosevelt was president. He chose Taft as his successor, nominated and elected him. Taft was Roosevelt's cabinet officer. He had the choice of a position on the supreme bench or the presidency at the hands of Roosevelt and chose the latter. He was elected. Two firm party friends four years ago. Two fierce political enemies now. Nothing is quite so strange as politics. Beginning last winter when the supporters of Roosevelt brought him out

SIR GERARD LOWTHER

British Ambassador at Constantinople Is Busy.

There has been nothing quite so spectacular in politics as the fight in the Republican party. The effort of Roosevelt to capture the Republican national convention, Taft's success by a very narrow margin and the bolt of Roosevelt from the Republican party and his organization of a new party have made the contest of these old political chums and cronies the leading feature of the campaign.

Wilson's Surprise Party.

Woodrow Wilson had a surprise party for the Democrats at Baltimore, and I am thinking that he was one of the surprised also. The Democrats furnished entertainments for the political onlookers, first in the fight between Bryan and Parker for the temporary chairmanship. The only two men living who had run for president on the Democratic ticket met in a short contest for this fleeting honor. The several speeches of Bryan in which he lashed leading Democrats and denounced New York Democracy furnished intense interest to the proceedings. The almost successful run of Champ Clark for the nomination was the pathetic feature of the whole campaign. A man who had received more votes in the primaries, who had a majority of the delegates on many ballots, was defeated by the two-thirds rule, which only once before operated to defeat for the nomination a man who had secured a majority of the convention, and that was sixty years ago.

The split in the Republican party and the fact that both Taft and Roosevelt were candidates naturally engendered personalities. Criticisms of public acts, charges of all kinds, were made against the two men who had been elected to the highest office in the land.

The Flash of a Gun.

Most dramatic and shocking, however, was the attempt upon Colonel Roosevelt's life in the midst of the hottest part of the campaign. The assassin's bullet stopped the personalities of the campaign, and for the first time the people had a square look at the candidate and became aware of the issues. As Colonel Roosevelt was responsible for the personal character which the contest had assumed, both because of what he said and what he caused his bitter enemies to say about him, the peril in which he was placed hushed every critical voice. A truce was proclaimed in obedience to the inherent good sense of the American people, who would not have a man abused who was near the gates of death and more particularly because they wanted to rebuke the cowardly attack upon a man's life.

The effect of the attack upon Colonel Roosevelt's life no doubt helped him in the canvass. Beyond question many people supported him who might have voted for one of the other candidates. His brave manner and iron nerve which enabled him to make a speech with a bullet in his body challenged admiration and won support.

Again was the campaign interrupted. This interruption came but a few days ago when the nation was shocked by word of the death of Vice President Sherman. As the Republican national committee could not get together in time to name a successor before the election, Mr. Taft faces the polls today without a "running mate," the first time such a situation has occurred in the history of American politics.

Campaign Contributions.

Not the least interesting side light during the campaign was the investigation conducted by a committee of the senate into the expenditures during the campaigns of 1904 and 1908, and the preliminary campaigns of different candidates seeking nominations in 1912. While everybody knew that big corporations had always made campaign contributions and that all parties had sought and received money wherever they could get it, yet there were many startling developments during the investigation and the testimony taken which, while not affecting the present election to any great extent, will have an important bearing upon future campaigns.

The one important result of the investigation was that big corporations and men of great wealth did not contribute as freely as in years past and the different committees have been appealing to the voters for small contributions to pay the actual necessary campaign expenses.

POWERS CANNOT INTERFERE NOW

Turkey Must Humble Herself to Victorious foe.

CONTINUES HOPELESS FIGHT

Until They Are Willing to Swallow Their Pride and Go to the Latently Despised "Christian Dogs" With a Plea For an Armistice, the Battered and Panic-Stricken Moslems May Not Hope to Escape Punishment.

London, Nov. 5.—If she wants peace Turkey must treat directly with her conquerors. The powers to whom she went with pleas for mediation told the porte that they could not go to the Balkan allies with a request for an armistice. Only proposals for peace will be made by the powers, was the answer Turkey got. Some of the powers have said that an armistice would offend the Balkan victors. Others take the stand that such a move as Turkey asks of them would be an infringement of international law. The Ottoman must therefore continue his hopeless fight until he is willing to go to his enemy with a plea for an armistice. Bulgaria, upon whom the bulk of the fighting has fallen, and her allies are firm in their stand that there must be no outside interference. The terms of peace will be a matter then for the belligerents to determine.

It is hoped in the chancelleries that eventually the powers may hit upon some way in which their offices in behalf of peace may be offered. But when Turkey came with her unexpected appeal the diplomatic negotiations then under way were extremely nebulous. Even the preliminaries had not been settled. Austria stood aside in dissent while France and Russia and England made proposals, and with Austria stood Germany and Italy. Diplomats say, however, that Austria may have mistaken the meaning of "disinterestedness." Austria apparently took the word as directed against the idea of any economic arrangements between Austria and the Balkan states. Austria's attitude, however still causes uneasiness in Europe, and the rumors of the mobilization of her troops persist.

From the military point of view the campaign may already be regarded as settled. The Bulgars look forward to the ensuing diplomatic campaign with dark determination. They have decided to take advantage of every point they have gained, and will negotiate only directly with the Turks.

"There has been little rest and no respite for the harried remnant of the Turkish army," writes a correspondent from the front. "Onward, ever onward, is the cry of its pursuers, until the Bulgarian cannon thunders at the rear, insatiable for deaths to make its hourly toll of battered, tattered human wrecks, once soldiers, but all whose feeble energies are now devoted not to fighting, but to fleeing for their very lives over the wide Thracian plain, up the steep, rocky slopes of Chorlu to its wide plateaus and down either side across the stony valley which leads toward the Chatalja.

"The broken army is crawling. It cannot longer run. Days and nights of awful suffering have reduced its gait to a mere totter. The track of the fleeing army is paved with the dead and the dying, and as an aerial rear guard a great flock of black crows which caw a hideous requiem hover near, marking down some weary soldier staggering to his end.

"Prairie dogs of vulpine breed scenting carrion, have gathered from afar, their dismal howling resounding throughout the night. They and the crows are the only grave diggers for the dead."

PORT GUARDIANS

The Great Powers of Europe Send Warships to Constantinople.

London, Nov. 5.—Premier Asquith stated in the house of commons last night that Sir Gerard Lowther, the British ambassador at Constantinople, had informed the government by telegraph that it had been decided by a meeting of diplomats there that it might be necessary to protect the foreign communities and that therefore warships should be sent. The consent of the porte had been obtained and one British, one French, one German and one Austro-Hungary warship would pass through the Dardanelles while a Russian war vessel would pass the Bosphorus.

A HANDS-OFF POLICY IN BALKAN SITUATION

Uncle Sam Not Concerned in European Imbroglio.

Washington, Nov. 5.—In the opinion of officials here the passage of warships of the powers through the Dardanelles to Constantinople insures the safety of all foreigners in the Turkish capital. The warships are expected to prove effective preventives against any rioting or massacre in the Turkish capital. The United States takes no step in the matter and will continue its strict adherence to a policy of "hands off" in the entire situation in Turkey and the Balkans.

The rapidity with which the developments in the war between Turkey and the allies have come, continues to amaze official Washington. The general opinion is that nothing that Turkey can do now can turn the tide setting against her.

The embarrassments of the powers over the potentialities of the Balkan situation and the fate of Turkey is calling out no sympathy in official Washington. While no comments are made in any official source of opinion, it is known that the administration expects to see the Balkan tangle absorb all Europe for many months to come. This fact is regarded with a certain satisfaction, as it is expected that it will serve to submerge for a time the various controversies in which the United States is engaged with certain European countries, and especially the matter of the Panama canal tolls. It is not believed that Great Britain will feel like starting up any animosity over the canal question as long as the Balkan situation continues to contain for her such tremendous possibilities. Russia, too, may find it easy to be conciliatory on the passport question during the coming winter. Even though the United States is keeping entirely out of the Balkan question and will continue to do so, it is regarded as not at all unlikely that in the event of a great struggle growing out of the present situation, the friendship of this country may be eagerly sought by more than one of the interested parties.

Gasoline Can Exploded.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Nov. 5.—Mrs. Minnie Wesley Richard, thirty-seven years old, wife of Louis D. Richards, a foreman in the saw and edge tool plant, was fatally burned when starting a fire with gasoline. The can exploded and the woman was covered with a sheet of fire. Mr. Richards was also seriously burned in attempting to extinguish the flames.

TERSE TELEGRAMS

Chief J. E. Wilkie of the United States secret service will throw the protection of the secret service around the president-elect as soon as he learns who he is.

Mrs. Allison Cleveland Hardon, a second cousin of the late President Cleveland, is dead at her home in Cambridge, Mass., from heart trouble, aged seventy-two.

Joe Mandot outpointed Ad Wolgast, pugilistic lightweight champion, in their bout at New Orleans. The biggest crowd in recent fight history saw the battle, the receipts exceeding $100,000.

United States Senator Henry A. DuPont of Delaware denies a report published under Washington date that he will resign. "The article is untrue," he said. "I have no intention whatever of resigning my seat in the United States senate."

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. John E. Geraghty at Newport, and it is thought the event will be the means of bringing about a reconciliation between Mrs. Geraghty, formerly Julia French, and all of her fashionable family, with whom she has been estranged since her elopement with the family chauffeur.

COUNTY CLERKS ARE INTERESTED

Contention Over Fees Going to Higher Court.

LEONARD QUILL SUSTAINED

Circuit Court at Indianapolis Holds That County Clerk Was Entitled to Retain One-Half the Money Collected For Naturalization Fees, on the Ground That He Was Acting as an Agent of the Federal Government.

Indianapolis, Nov. 5.—That Leonard M. Quill, former county clerk, was acting as an agent of the government in collecting naturalization fees and that he had the right to retain one-half the fees so collected, is the decision of Judge Remster of the circuit court, made in the case of the state, on relation of the board of county commissioners, against Quill to recover $1,298.50.

The court sustained the demurrer filed by Quill's attorney, who contended that Quill acted under a federal law when he retained half the fees collected, and that the state law touching on the subject was null and void. The case will be taken to the supreme court, as the state board of accounts desires the question settled.

Judge Remster said a reading of the entire act would seem to be conclusive that the fees in question were to be retained in payment for the services rendered in connection with the imposed duties.

"If the state statute is valid," said Judge Remster, "it would prevent any part of such fees going to the national government, for the statute provides that all of such fees, and not half thereof, shall belong to and be the property of the county." If this provision is valid would not an action lie for all such fees? For, if this act is valid, all of these fees belonged to and became the property of the county.

"The question decided is that the act of congress providing for the collection and disposition of fees in connection with the naturalization of aliens is the supreme law of the land and nullifies any state statute in conflict therewith, and fees collected under the national act are not subject to the state statute."

JURORS VOTE

Each of the Twelve Taken Home by Federal Court Bailiff.

Indianapolis, Nov. 5.—In the case of the alleged dynamiters, there is no hearing today in the federal court, court having adjourned for the day to give the jurors a chance to vote. The twelve jurors, each in charge of a bailiff of the United States court, were taken to their homes to vote. Court was adjourned for only one day, on account of the election, but as the adjournment was from 5 o'clock last evening until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, it afforded an opportunity to take all jurors to the polls. The juror who had the longest trip to take in Samuel Morrison, who lives six miles from North Vernon. Only the very briefest visit to homes of jurors will be permitted. None of the jurors has been home since Oct. 1, and the progress of the trial indicates another three months duty in court.

It is a "farmer jury," and in many instances automobiles were obtained at the nearest railway station and the jurors hustled to the polls and taken back to the station in machines.

Uncle Sam is paying the expenses, as it is by order of federal court that the jurors are taken home to vote. It is estimated, however, that the expense, which principally is railway fare, will not exceed $150.

Six Democrats and six Republicans are sitting on the jury.

Most of the defendants did not go home to vote. In most instances the distance is too great. In several instances the operation of registration laws in different states has caused defendants to lose their votes, as the registration date passed while defendants were in Indianapolis.

Boy Mistaken For Burglar.

Anderson, Ind., Nov. 5.—Slipping out of his bedroom window when forbidden to attend a social function, Harry Hopper, aged sixteen, was badly wounded by his father, who thought the boy was a burglar. Returning home about midnight, the boy had difficulty in raising the window, and the noise awakened the father. Armed with an iron poker the father entered the son's room and as the boy came in he dealt him a blow on the head.

Fireman Killed in Wreck.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 5.—Fireman C. Merder was instantly killed and Engineer Henry Hinkle probably fatally hurt in a collision on the Wabash railroad near Topeka, Lawrence county. The trains involved were a west-bound passenger and an eastbound freight, and both engines and a baggage car rolled down an eighteen-foot embankment. Two passengers were slightly hurt.

Fatal Hunting Accident.

Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 5.—John Kieffer, a farmer, is dead of a shotgun wound received while he was hunting. He was climbing a fence when the gun was discharged and the load of shot entered his right breast.

REGINALD M'KENNA

SUFFRAGETTE BANDS STOP THE SPEAKER

British Home Secretary Is Put to Flight.

London, Nov. 5.—A band of suffragettes prevented Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, from speaking at a non-political meeting in London last night by howling "brute," "traitor" and other epithets. One woman chained herself to a chair and was ejected with difficulty amid wild disorder. Others were ejected, but there were too many of them to throw all out. Mr. McKenna was compelled to abandon his attempt to speak and left the hall by the back door to avoid a mob of angry women who were waiting for him at the front of the building.

STILL SUFFERING

More Skin Grafting Necessary in Ethel
Smith's Case.

Gary, Ind., Nov. 5.—The death of William Rugh, the crippled Gary newsboy, who died that a girl unknown to him might live, has set an example that is being followed by others.

Miss Ethel Smith, for whom he made the unparalleled sacrifice, was again placed upon the operating table in the Gary General hospital and fifty inches of skin were grafted onto her burned legs.

Charles Smith, father of the girl to whom Rugh gave his useless leg; Raymond, her brother, and Roy Roberts, her sweetheart, are the three who underwent the operation.

The skin taken from the newsboy's leg, 150 inches, proved insufficient. There were spots which had not been covered, and it was necessary to have more skin. The three men cheerfully submitted, but the girl, thinking with horror of the death of Rugh, begged them not to do it.

Sheriff Nearly Drowns.

Logansport, Ind., Nov. 5.—Sheriff Warren K. Butler fell into Bruce lake when fishing and would have drowned had not William Eddington pulled him out. Butler was trying to land a bass and pulled so hard he fell from his boat into the lake.

CROWDS EXPECTED AT SHORT COURSE

Arrangements are Being Completed For Meeting Given By Purdue University This Month.

BEST EQUIPMENT EVER USED

Information Offered is the Result of Years of Investigation and Experimental Work.

Arrangements are being made to handle a large attendance at the Farmers' Short Course to be put on by the Agricultural Extension Department of Purdue University at Seymour, on November 21-22-23, 1912.

The Extension Department has this year the most competent staff and the best equipment it has ever used at Short Courses in Indiana.

"Great Care is being taken," says Prof. G. I. Christie, Superintendent of the Agricultural Extension Department, "to prepare for presentation at the Short Courses this season, a program of agricultural lectures and demonstrations that shall be of the greatest practical value and use to all interested in Agriculture."

Live stock-breeding, feeding and judging, corn growing and corn judging, the growing of legumes, spraying, pruning, care and general management of the orchard, selecting the dairy herd, breeding, feeding and housing it, milk production, milk testing, keeping records of the dairy herd, poultry raising in all its phases; and for the women, cooking demonstrations and the discussion of important household problems—these and many other subjects will be discussed in some 20 to 25 lectures and as many practical demonstrations in the various classes.

The information offered is the result of years of investigation, experimental work and study on the part of the staff of the School of Agriculture and Experiment Station at Purdue. The demonstration material carried by the Short Course staff is so complete that the work is bound to appeal to all and be readily understood and appreciated by all.

Many farmers have put in long, weary years learning by hard experience such things as the experiment station, with its land, men and equipment, are engaged in finding out for them from year to year.

Efficiency is the keynote of the times. If the farmer would be efficient, he must embrace every opportunity of getting practical information bearing on his life and his work.

Outside of a regular course at Purdue, there is not a better opportunity afforded the Indiana farmer that is afforded by these Short Courses.

The farmer folk of Jackson county will surely show the rest of the state that they are progressive in educational matters at least, and that they are determined to grow as good field crops, raise as good live stock, have as good roads and as good homes as any other county in the state.

The twenty Short Courses planned for the state this season must reach directly not less than 20,000 people. The local management of the Short Courses at Seymour as well as the Purdue people, look for strong support and a big attendance. Think it over and plan to be there. Induce the whole neighborhood to come. Make it the social and educational event of the season.

MAY ADVANCE RATES

Railroads May Make Changes in Freight Rate Schedules.

That a concerted effort is to be made by leading railways of the United States this winter to obtain a general advance in freight rates is the report from Washington. The demand will be made, it is said, on the plea that it is necessary to make improvements and that this can not be accomplished without higher rates.

It is reported that the Interstate Commerce Commission is cognizant of the contemplated movement. Simultaneous with the railroad's demand for higher rates, powerful organization of shippers are to make a fight to bring about legislation for the control of railroad capitalization, it is said. Indications are that the results will be a struggle of big proportions which will center in Washington.

The railroads will seek, it is said, to justify proposed increases before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the ground that their business is increasing enormously, that the moving of crops this fall has strained their carrying capacity to the utmost and that they must have extensions and betterment.

Many of the leading organizations of shippers do not so much object to an increase in the freight rates, providing that the increase be used in the improvement of the railroads and the enlargement of facilities for handling traffic. What they do object to, is to the rate increases going to swell the bank rolls of the railroad owners.

ENGINEER KILLED

Fireman Also Injured in Boiler Explosion at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Nov. 5—John O'Donnell, an engineer, was killed and his fireman, Charles Emery, 1233 Charles street, was injured yesterday when the boiler of a traction engine which they had in charge exploded at Merrill and Missouri streets. O'Donnell was thrown nearly 150 feet. He lived only a few minutes after being taken to the City Hospital in the police emergency automobile. Sergt. Hagerman was in charge of the investigation.

Bits of broken iron were thrown hundreds of feet from the boiler when it let go, and windows in the home of Abraham Isaacs, 544 South Missouri street, and Emma Harmon, 542 South Missouri street, were broken by the concussion.

Flaming embers were thrown through the broken windows of the Harmon home and set fire to the carpets. A piano in the Isaacs home was struck and scorched by some of the embers hurled through the windows.

The cause of the explosion is not known definitely and several different theories have been advanced. The police are inclined to believe that O'Donnell allowed the water in the boiler to get low, then turned cold water on to the crown sheet.

The engine was the property of the Emerson Brandingham Machine Company, and O'Donnell and Emery had been instructed to take it to Shelby street and the Belt Railway to take the place of another engine. They had progressed about two blocks when the explosion occurred.

O'Donnell was operating the levers back of the boilers when the boiler exploded. He was thrown from his seat, receiving the full force of the blast, and was hurled twenty feet into the air and a great distance backward. When he alighted he rolled many feet, according to Emma Harmon, an eye witness. When picked up O'Donnell was insensible.

Emery was in front of the machine clearing the roadway. An ash door in front of the engine was torn loose and struck him. He was knocked down, falling face forward. His injuries consist of bruises and contusions about the head and body. It was not necessary to take him to a hospital. Corner Durham was notified of the death of O'Donnell and began an investigation yesterday.

GREAT CROWDS AT BLACKPOOL

Multitude That Flocked to English Seaside Resort Impressed W. D. Howells, Veteran Traveler as He Was Acknowledged.

"Whenever we said we were going to Blackpool," writes W. D. Howells in the Atlantic, "it seemed to fill our English friends with surprise and pleasure. They asked why we were going to Blackpool, and when we tried to say they laughed the more."

"We were, in fact, so high in the social scale through our friendships that we might never have heard of Blackpool if it had not been for one of the most liberal of our acquaintances who had noted some years before our interest in the popular crowd at Llandudno, and told us we ought to see Blackpool."

"He tried to enlighten our dense superiority by explaining that Blackpool was the seaside resort beyond Liverpool of the whole cotton spinning and iron casting country, and that masters and men alike thronged there in the season, and masters lavished their gains and the men their earnings in one mad month or wild week of unbridled gaiety."

"Before this in writing of English things I have had occasion to intimate that many of them afforded exercise to that modesty which is always ready to the heart of American brag. Whether the scale in England is so small generally that any variation from it seems prodigious or whether the things are really great, I am not ready to say, but in that little island there are certainly things that impress one as great."

"London, for example, unquestionably outdoes any city of ours. New York is a large town, but New York, except for her high grade of intelligence, could easily be lost in London. The only thing in which we excel England beyond parallel and peradventure is the spectacular purity of our municipal administrations and our freedom from graft in civic affairs."

"If you come, however, to something like the crowd on the promenade at Blackpool, you have several other English crowds to compare it with. You have the crowds at Folkestone, at Margate, at Brighton, which, although they are vastly smaller, are so much larger than any American seaside crowds that there is no talking in the same breath except of Atlantic City alone at Easter time."

"If you are there then, at that point where the myriads of the Board Walk thicken for a conscious moment under the eye of the camera scanning it for a postal card photograph, you can have some notion of the crowd forever writhing, forever worming, squirming up and down at Blackpool."

"Dreadful enough to look at, the mammoth mass became terrible when you fused yourself in its bulk. It seemed the same in bulk by night and by day; it must have slept some time, perhaps not in bulk but in detail, each atom that sank away to slumber replaced by another atom fresh for the vigil; of if it slept in bulk it was in some somnolent sort, with the sense of a bad dream, a writhing and twisting nightmare."

"It was always awful to look upon, but awfulest at high noon, when it had swollen to its hugest and was imaginably famishing for lunch with the hunger of some consuming insect horde. Possibly I am exaggerating in the impression I am trying to give of the Blackpool crowd. Doubtless any happy couple, near wed or newly wed, of those that abounded in the mass could prove me grotesquely mistaken, if not wilfully false. They could say that they had the time of their lives that day at Blackpool and could ask nothing better than to repeat their transport."

PENGUIN OIL INDUSTRY

BIRDS ARE CAPTURED AND BRED FOR PROFIT.

Macquarie Island, Between Tasmania and the Antarctic Continent, Is the Center of a Promising Commercial Enterprise.

What is probably the most southerly industry of the world is being carried on at Macquarie Island, about halfway between Tasmania and the Antarctic continent, in capture of penguins for their oil. Macquarie Island belongs to the state of Tasmania, and has an area of about 25,000 acres, being about twenty-five miles long and five miles wide. The island is leased by the Tasmanian government to Joseph Hatch, who has established a penguin oil industry there. Recently meeting Mr. Hatch, I obtained the following particulars from him:

There are probably 80,000,000 penguins on the island, so that the stock to be drawn from seems almost limitless. There are also a large number of sea elephants about the shores of this island. The oil is obtained from the penguins by boiling the carcasses in digesters capable of dealing with 800 birds at a time. The tops of the digesters are fastened down and steam applied until about twenty-five pounds pressure is obtained. The steam is then turned off and water pumped into the bottoms of the digesters, this causing the oil to rise, when it is taken off the top by a tap.

The oil is placed in barrels and sold to binder twine makers in Australia and New Zealand. There is a good market for all the oil that is produced here, but the industry has met with several severe losses through wreck of ships attempting to visit the island. There is no harbor about the island, so that vessels have to lie about half a mile off the rocky coast, and all material has to be conveyed to and from the shore on rafts formed of casks. Owing to the roughness of the open roadstead, it is impossible to obtain insurance for vessels trading there.

Macquarie Island is about 750 miles southeast of Hobart. The island is barren, being covered only with tussock grass. Whaling ships visiting there introduced rabbits and Maori hens, which are now quite prolific. The Mawson Antarctic expedition from Australia has established a wireless station there, and daily messages are now being received at Hobart. It was the intention of this expedition to use Macquarie Island as a means of sending messages all the way from their base at Adelle land to Hobart, but unfortunately the wireless station established at Adelle land has been unable to communicate with Macquarie Island, owing, it is supposed, to being too near the magnetic disturbances caused by the proximity of the south magnetic pole. The station at Macquarie Island, however, has already proved of considerable value to shipping in Australian waters by giving warning of storms coming up from the south.—Consul Henry D. Baker, Hobart, Tasmania.

American "Aristocracy."

If gift were only gold, or sugar candy common sense, what a fine thing our society would be! If to lavish money upon objects of vertu, to wear the most costly dresses and always to have them cut in the height of fashion; to build houses 30 feet broad as if they were palaces; to furnish them with all the luxurious devices of a Persian genius; to give superb banquets at which your guests laugh and which make you miserable; to drive a fine carriage and ape European liveries and crests and coats of arms; to resent the friendly advances of your baker's wife and the lady of your butcher (you being yourself a cobbler's daughter); to talk much of the "old families" and of your aristocratic foreign friends; to despise labor; to prate of "good society;" to travesty and parody, in every conceivable way, a society which we know only in books and by the superficial observation of foreign travel, which arises out of a social organization entirely unknown to us, and which is opposed to our fundamental and essential principles; if all these were fine, what a prodigiously fine society would ours be!—George William Curtis.

Drunken Monkeys.

According to a recent letter from the Congo region on the west coast of Africa, the monkeys there are inordinately fond of a kind of beer made by the natives, who use the beverage to capture their poor relations.

Having placed quantities of the beer where the monkeys can get it, the natives wait until their victims are in various degrees of inebriation, and when they then mingle with them the poor creatures are too much fuddled to recognize the difference between negro and ape.

When a negro takes the hand of one of them to lead him off, some other fond creature clings to the hand of the latter one, and another one to his hand; thus a single negro may sometimes be seen carrying off a string of staggering monkeys.

When secured the beer is administered in decreasing quantities, so that they may only gradually awaken to the sad results of their spree.

Deserved Protest.

By Captain GEO. L. KILMER, Late U. S. V.

FIFTY years ago the last week in October the famous Confederate cruiser Alabama was pursuing her career as a commerce destroyer within little more than a day's steaming from Boston or New York. Cities on the north Atlantic coast were in fear of a "visit" from the bold Confederate. Vague rumors of her depredations in nearby waters had reached shore. Owing to the depredations of the Alabama upon United States merchant vessels Lloyd's raised this class of risks 2 and 3 per cent.

On Oct. 28 the officers and crews of several United States merchant vessels which the cruiser Alabama had burned at sea reached Boston harbor in a captive ship which had been spared than those of the United States. He steamed southward toward the Caribbean sea.

The United States navy department had neglected to send warships to guard the Atlantic ports just as it had failed to protect the Azores whalers. Ships sent out to punish the Alabama were seeking for her off the European coast and in south Atlantic waters. Ten days after the cruiser steamed away from New York the warship Dahcotah arrived from a vain search for her in southern waters.

"Jeb" Stuart's New Role.

At the close of his daring ride into Pennsylvania in October, 1862, General "Jeb" Stuart, the commander of General R. E. Lee's cavalry corps, hav-the general fate for this purpose. On the same date the United States war steamer Kearsarge was near the Azores searching for the cruiser, a search which ended fatally for the Alabama eighteen months later off the harbor of Cherbourg, France.

The Alabama's Maiden Cruise.

At the close of July, 1862, the steamer Alabama, which later became the famous Confederate cruiser, sailed out of the Mersey river, England, to the open sea, ostensibly on a trial trip. The British government had ordered her detention on the ground that she intended to make war on a "friendly power," but the local authorities of Liverpool failed to act in time.

The United States frigate Tuscarora was watching for the departure of the Alabama, which was then known only as the "290," but the Alabama avoided interference by slipping out of a little used channel. About the same time a bark loaded with arms for the Alabama sailed from London, a British vessel having on board Captain Rafael Semmes, future commander of the cruiser, and a complement of officers and sailors was already on the sea, and all three ships met at the Western Islands, off Portugal. Here took place a dramatic consecration of the ship to her startling career under the Confederate flag.

Semmes started the ship immediately for the whaling grounds off the Azores, where whalers flying the United States flag were numerous and wholly unprotected by warships. In a short time the Alabama captured and burned ten whalers. Then her commander, who appears from his autobiography to have been something of a wit, decided to "throw a panic" into the northern coast cities, notably New York, whose press and chamber of commerce had denounced him as a "pirate ripe for the gibbet."

The Cruiser Close to New York.

In carrying out this project the Alabama steamed closer and closer to New York and on Oct. 29, when 200 miles off that port, captured the Maine lumber brig Baron de Castine. Semmes ransomed the ship under a bond of $6,000, payable to the "president of the Confederate States when peace should be declared." It was also stipulated that the brig should carry to New York the masters, mates and crews of two ships burned after the last conquest of captives to port. Semmes directed the skipper of the brig to present his compliments to the New York chamber of commerce. The Alabama had then only four days' coal supply on board, and her commander decided to look for more in ports less hostile

The troopers in the field under Stuart and Pleasanton in 1862 had seen little of war except cavalry scouting, with an occasional skirmish involving at most one or two regiments, but usually only a single troop or squadron. Individually the men were brave and took great risks. When carrying dispatches and bringing information from the front to headquarters, they risked their lives under circumstances more trying to the soldier's nerve than a battle.

Noted Cavalry Scouts.

This was the first campaign in Virginia in which both armies had been supplied with competent cavalry scouts. Stuart and Pleasanton were able leaders. With Stuart were General T. S. Rosser and General Wade Hampton, who afterward became famous at the head of mounted brigades. In Averell and Bayard, Pleasanton had the match of Stuart's best brigadiers. Both Federals became noted as cavalry fighters in the campaigns which followed these scouting exploits in Virginia.

Although Stuart was able to compel caution in the advance of McClellan's cavalry vanguard and keep his chief informed about the enemy's route of march he did not solve the mystery of the campaign. McClellan marched close to the eastern slope of the Blue Ridge in order to be ready for battle should Lee offer it, but the Federal commander did not purpose to leave the issue entirely in the control of his antagonist.

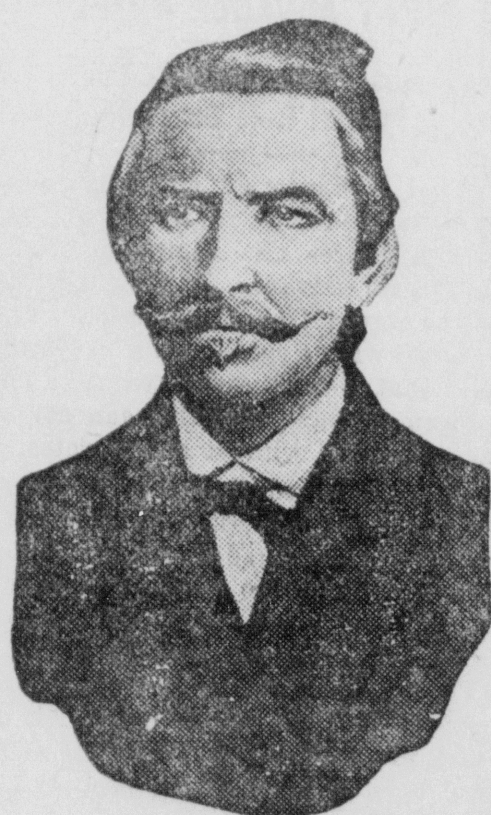

A Sharp Cavalry Encounter.

The march of the Army of the Potomac southward from the Potomac was rapid, considering that a powerful foe was near at hand. McClellan sent Pleasanton and his cavalry ahead of the main column in order to keep Stuart from closing the passes of the Blue Ridge, for he intended to pass the mountain with his whole force in case he discovered that Lee, with his army or any large part of it, remained in the Shenandoah valley. If Lee halted in the valley with all his troops, McClellan would pass through the mountains south of him and cut him off from Richmond.

General T. L. Rosser rode out with his Virginia brigade on the morning of Nov. 4 and met Averell at the village of Markham. The fight was the sharpest thus far in the campaign. Averell captured two of Rosser's guns and 300 prisoners, but Rosser's troopers made a rally and took the captives back again. The recapture of Rosser's guns was a daring feat. They were surrounded and attacked front and rear. A handful of foreigners whom Pelham had trained, known as "the French detachment," stuck by their pieces, singing the "Marseillaise," until a friendly regiment charged to their aid. Rosser was beaten in the end and retired to Barbee's Crossroads, uniting with Hampton's brigade. Stuart had his men together and decided to give battle to Pleasanton on that ground.

Stuart's Stand at the Crossroads.

Stuart's line was on the crest of a hill behind the town, with a reserve at the crossroads. Averell forced the fighting in front and at the same time detached a force to threaten Warren ton in Stuart's rear. To save his command Stuart ordered both Hampton and Rosser to fall back. In attempting to fall back the First North Carolina was hard pressed by the Eighth New York. Colonel Davis of the Eighth New York was one of the heroes of the cavalry ride out of Harper's Ferry a few weeks before. Davis was an intrepid fighter. The enemy on his front at Barbee's Crossroads was too strong for him to master in direct attack. He dismounted one squadron behind a stone wall and with the remainder of his regiment rode out to meet the Carolinians. The men behind the wall poured a galling flank and front fire into the enemy.

The leader of the North Carolinians, Colonel James B. Gordon, saw Davis movement at the stone wall and charged toward it, but his men became entangled in a ditch in front and were staggered by the fire from the wall. Wheeling about, the Carolinians stood back and were charged while on the retreat by the Eighth New York, under Davis. Some of Davis' men rode into the ranks of the enemy. Gordon's regiment left a number of carbines, horses and prisoners in the hands of Davis.

In spite of Stuart's efforts to hold back the Army of the Potomac it forged steadily on in the general direction of the Rappahannock river, the infantry and artillery columns following close upon the heels of Pleasanton's cavalry.

LIVED ON RAW EGGS

Mr. Richard's Experience With Different Diets. Peaches and Buttermilk for Three Years.

Cecilton, Md.—Mr. George Richards, of this place, during the past 12 years, has probably tried more different diets than the average person would ever use in a lifetime.

What he has to say about his experiments, must therefore be highly interesting to anyone suffering from indigestion or stomach troubles of any kind.

He says: "For more than 12 years, I suffered with stomach troubles, and paid hundreds of dollars for doctor bills and medicines. I was also operated on for piles."

I lived on dried peaches and buttermilk for nearly three years. The only thing that would not give me pain was raw eggs. I was a physical wreck. I could not sleep, and was as near crazy as a man could well be."

I must say that after taking two 25-cent packages of Theodore's Black-Draught, it did me more good than all I ever spent for other medicines."

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to house-keeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. CHAPTER V. Struggle.

THE longer Stuart wrestled with the problem of Nan's yielding to the lure of Bivens' gold the more hideous and hopeless it became. He began to feel that he had been to blame. Why had he allowed the foolish pride of a lovers' quarrel to keep them apart for two weeks?

When he came downstairs he paused at the door. Harriet was playing and singing again, and the soft tones of her voice were healing. He walked gently to the door of the music room, leaned against the panel and watched and listened.

At last she stopped reluctantly, tipped her golden head sideways in a coquettish little triumphant movement and in the quaintest imitation of a man's voice said:

"I congratulate you, Miss Harriet—I like that very much!"

"Do you, professor? Oh, I'm so glad to please you!"

She shook her curls with genuine delight and played out the little dialogue with vivid imaginary touches.

Stuart laughed.

The girl leaped to her feet, blushing scarlet, rushed to his side and seized his hand.

"Did you see me, Jim? Was I very foolish?"

"Certainly not. I quite agree with the professor. You will some day sing before kings and queens, little girl."

He left her waving and smiling to him from the steps. He walked with new vigor and a deepening sense of gratitude to her. His breath deepened, and his step grew firm and swift. He would fight for his own. He would go straight to Nan and laugh at this announcement. He would compel her to hear him. It was an absurd hour to call, but all the better.

Mrs. Primrose's greeting was so cordial, so genuinely friendly, that for a moment he was puzzled. Could it be possible he had misjudged her?

She pressed his hand warmly and lingeringly.

"Oh, Jim, I'm so glad you've come! Why have you stayed away so long? It was so foolish of you. You gave up without a struggle. I'm shocked beyond measure at Nan. I told her that his millions would never bring happiness unless her heart went with them—that her love for you was a thing she couldn't lay aside as a cloak she had worn. I told Nan the day she promised to marry Mr. Bivens that you were worth a dozen such men, no matter how many millions he had. You have always been my choice—you know that."

Stuart could control himself no longer. He rose and faced Mrs. Primrose with a look which brought her eloquence to an abrupt end.

"Mrs. Primrose, for once in my life I am going to tell you the truth. You have always been my bitterest foe. You brought Nan to New York to get her away from me."

The mother's eyes blazed with honest wrath.

"Yes, I did; and I'm glad I did it—you ungrateful wretch!"

"And you have always been busily poisoning her mind against me and corrupting her imagination with dreams of a life of luxury."

"And, thank God, I've succeeded at last in bringing her to her senses in time to save her from throwing herself away on you, Jim Stuart!"

As Mrs. Primrose left Nan quietly entered the room. Her face was set for battle in a proud defiant smile. She was totally unprepared for the way in which Stuart met her.

With a quick step he was at her side, seized both her hands in a grip of fierce tenderness and in low tones of vibrant passion said:

"This thing don't go with me, Nan. I won't accept it. I'm going to fight—fight for my own—for you are mine—mine by every law of God and man, and you are worth fighting for!"

The hard smile of defiance melted from the beautiful face, and a flush of tenderness slowly overspread her cheeks. It was sweet to be loved like that by a strong, masterful man. She started to speak, and he raised his hand:

"I know, dear, you said our engagement was broken. I don't believe you mean it. I couldn't. The news of your engagement to Bivens came as a bolt out of the blue sky. I refuse to accept such an act as final. You did it out of pique. You don't mean it. You can't mean it! I told you the other day I had a surprise for you. I have. It's worth a day. You promised me one in the country before our foolish quarrel. I want it now. You will come?"

She hesitated a moment and said:

"Yes."

Within an hour they had reached the hills overlooking Gravesend bay, and the magnificent sweep of water below the Narrows. Nan had scarcely spoken on the way, answering Stuart's questions in friendly nods, smiles and monosyllables.

"Before we go farther," Stuart said when they had left the car. "I want to show you a model home a friend of mine has built out here. It's my ideal, and I think you'll like it."

As they entered the gate, half hidden in the hedge, the girl exclaimed:

"What a lovely little place!"

A gardener who was watering some flowers on a sign from Stuart hastened up the gravel walk and opened the door.

Every window commanded entrancing views of the bay and ocean. Every ship entering or leaving the harbor of New York must pass close and could be seen for miles going to sea.

When Stuart finally led Nan out on the broad veranda of the second floor she was in a flutter of excitement over the perfection of its details.

"I think it's wonderful, Jim!" she exclaimed, with enthusiasm. "I've never seen anything more nearly perfect. Whose is it?"

Stuart looked into her dark eyes with desperate yearning.

"It's yours, Nan!"

"Mine?"

"Yes, dear; this is my secret. I've been building this home for you the past year. I've put all the little money my father gave me with every dollar I could save. It's paid for, and here's the key. I meant to ask you out here to fix our wedding day. I ask you now. Forget the nightmare of the past two weeks, and remember only that we love each other."

Her lips quivered for just an instant, and her hand gripped the rail of the veranda.

"If I'd seen it four weeks ago, Jim, I really don't see how I could have resisted it, but now—she shook her head and laughed—"now it's too late."

"My God! Don't say that, Nan!" he pleaded. "It's never too late to do right. You know that I love you. You know that you love me."

"But I've discovered," she went on, with bantering, half challenging frankness, "that I love luxury too. I never knew how deeply and passionately before!" She paused a moment, looking toward Sea Gate. "Isn't that the anchorage of the Atlantic Yacht club?"

"Yes," he answered impatiently.

"Then that's Mr. Bivens' yacht, the big, ugly black one lying close inshore with steam up. He told me he would send her into drydock today. He was talking last night of a wedding cruise in her to the Mediterranean. I confess, Jim, that I want to shine, to succeed and dazzle and reign. This is perhaps the one chance of my life."

"Do you hold yourself so cheap?"

"You can't realize how much the power of millions means to a woman who chafes at the limitations the world puts on her sex. It's too late!"

"Don't, don't say it, Nan!"

"I think it wonderful, Jim!"

Stuart looked into her dark eyes with desperate yearning.

"It's yours, Nan!"

"Mine?"

"My God! Don't say that, Nan!" he pleaded. "It's never too late to do right. You know that I love you. You know that you love me."

"Why not be frank? This little cottage is a gem, I admit. But I've seen a splendid palace set in flowers and gleaming with subdued light. Soft music steals through its halls mingled with the laughter of throngs who love and admire me. Its banquet tables are laden with the costliest delicacies, while liveried servants hurry to and fro with plates and goblets of gold."

Stuart seized her arm with fierce strength that hurt. "You shall not do this hideous thing. You are mine, I tell you, and I am bigger than money. I have the power to think, to create ideas, to create beauty—the power that remakes the world. I expect to have all the money we shall need. In the years to come we shall be rich whether we seek it or not. But the sweetest days of all life will be those in which we fight side by side the first battles of life in youth and poverty when we shall count the pennies and save with care for the little ones God may send us."

"But life is short, Jim. I can have things now. He has already promised them—a palace in town, another by the sea, a great estate in the heart of the blue southern mountains we used to watch as children and armies of servants to do my bidding. I can live now."

"And you call these trappings and tinsel life?"

"I want them."

"My God, Nan, haven't you a soul? Hasn't the life within no meaning for you? To me such luxury is sheer insanity. The possibilities of personal luxury have been exhausted thousands of years ago. It's commonplace, vulgar and contemptible. If you wish for power why choose the lowest of all its forms? The way you are entering is worn bare by the feet of millions of forgotten fools whose bodies worms have eaten. Not one of them lives today even in a footnote of history."

"And yet, Jim, you know as well as I do that money is the sign of success and power; its absence, of failure and weakness. If you make a mistake in your career you can correct it and begin again. Being a woman, I cannot, for marriage is my only career. A mistake now would be to me fatal."

"And you are making the one tragic mistake no repentance can undo. The deliberate choice of evil, knowing it to be evil. Your heart is mine—mine, I tell you! Do you deny it?"

Again he seized her hand, gripped it fiercely and looked into her eyes with tender, searching gaze.

Nan looked away.

"Oh, Nan, dear, believe me!" he pleaded. "You can't deny this voice within the soul and live. Happiness is inside, not outside, dear."

The lover paused a moment, overcome with his emotion, and he knew by the quick rising and falling of the girl's breast that a battle was raging.

Quick to see his advantage, he drew her gently inside.

"See, Nan, there are no cheap imitations in here, no vulgar ornaments which mean nothing. This home will be a real one because it will have a soul. There can be no coarse or menial tasks within its walls because its work shall be glorified by the old immortal song of love and life."

Stuart leaned close and spoke in a low tense voice:

"And it will always be beautiful, Nan, because it will be penetrated with the touch of your hand. Every piece of furniture will glow with that radiance. Gold and precious stones can have no such luster. See, here I have planned to place your piano. There will be no music on earth like the songs those throbbing strings shall make to my soul when they quiver beneath the touch of your hand."

The lover slipped his arm gently around the girl's yielding form, her head drooped on his shoulder, the great dark eyes blinded with tears. For a moment he held her in silence, broken only by a deep sob. His hand touched her hair with the tenderest gesture as he whispered:

"We can only know a few real friends in this world, dearest. But one great love comes to any human soul, and life is all too short to lose a single day."

"Hush—hush, Jim!" the girl cried in anguish. "Don't say any more, please."

"Tell me that it's all right, dear," he urged. "You know you cannot leave me now. You know that you love me and that your love is a deathless thing."

"Yes, yes; I know," she gasped. "But I'm going to marry him. I can't help it. The spell of his millions is on me, and I can't shake it off."

With a determined effort she drew herself from his embrace and in hard, cold tones continued:

"No, Jim; you must face the truth. I am going to marry this man, and the most horrible thing I can say about myself is that, deeply as I love you, I know I shall be content with the splendid career that will be mine. I shall never regret my marriage."

The lover looked at her in a dazed way, as if unable to grasp the meaning of her words.

"But you can't do this vile thing. Since the world began I know that vain, weak, ignorant women have sold themselves to men they could not love for money, rank and luxury. But you are not of that breed, Nan. You are the typical American girl. You represent women whose hearts have been pure, whose lives have been clean, who have kept burning in the hearts of men the great faiths of the soul. Respect for women has been one of the foundations of our moral life. The woman who sells herself to buy bread stands higher in the moral world than you!"

"Go on, Jim; say the worst. And still I'm going to do it."

"Knowing full well that no ceremony of church or state, no word of priest or judge, no pealing of organ or pomp or pageantry can make this thing a marriage?"

The lover dropped in silence to the window seat and buried his face in his hands in a paroxysm of emotion beyond control. At length he rose and looked at the girl he loved long and tenderly.

"God in heaven! It's inconceivable

"The spell of his millions is on me."

when I look into your beautiful face! Have you no pity in your heart?"

The full lips smiled a cruel little smile.

"Men are strong, Jim. They can stand hard blows. You come of fighting stock. I know that you will survive. I'm sorry to hurt you, Jim, but I must; it's fate. The big world I somehow feel I'm akin to is calling me, and I'm going."

"And Bivens is this big world! If you will throw me over for money can't you wait until a real man goes with it? It wouldn't be so bad if I felt you had chosen one who was my equal physically and mentally in culture and breeding—but Bivens!"

"You underestimate his ability. You may hate him, but he is a man of genius."

"He is everything you loathe and yet you are going to marry him. You are giving up too easily. Bivens has only a couple of millions, and he may lose them. Don't hold yourself so cheap. If you were on the block for sale I'd give a million for each dimple in your cheeks. The smile that plays about your lips should bring millions. Your deep dark eyes, I swear, are worth a million each."

"Hush, Jim, dear, we must go now. I can't stand any more. There's a limit."

"Yes, I know. Forgive me."

Without another word he led her from the place, closed the little gate quietly and returned to her home.

Alone inside the parlor they stood in silence a moment, and she took his hand in hers.

"I'm sorry, but it must be goodbye. Your love has been a sweet and wonderful thing in my life."

"And you throw it aside as a worthless rag."

"No," she answered, smiling. "It shall be mine always. Goodbye."

She raised her lips to his in a cold kiss.

Dazed with anguish, he turned and left. The door closed on his retreating figure, and Nan burst into a flood of passionate tears.

DELICIOUS TOMATO SOUPS.

WHEN in a hurry a delicious soup may be made with tomatoes. Tomato soup may be made with stock or with milk.

Tomatoes which are too old or otherwise unavailable to serve fresh may be made into soup or puree. They should be strained after they are cooked.

The soup may be served with bread croutons or with crackers.

Some Simple Recipes.

Spiced Tomato Soup.—Take a quart can of tomatoes. Add to them one pint of hot water, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, six cloves, a saltspoonful of pepper and bring to a boil. Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan. When it melts add one tablespoonful of minced onions and one tablespoonful of parsley. Fry five minutes. Add one tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Stir into the hot tomato soup. Strain and serve with boiled rice.

Puree of Tomatoes.—For this you may use either canned or fresh tomatoes. If you take the latter allow one tomato to each person. Scald them, peel the skin off and mash through a sieve or take some tomato sauce—about a dessertspoonful per person—and stir in brown butter in which you have previously fried some chopped onions. Cook for two or three minutes or more without burning. Pour boiling water on to this and add a tablespoonful of tapioca per plate of soup, salt and pepper. When done it will be ready to serve with fried dice of bread.

Wholesome Fare.

Bisque of Tomatoes.—Take a half can of tomatoes, a teaspoonful of minced onions, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and of paprika, a tablespoonful each of flour and butter, two cupfuls of milk, a cupful of water or stock, and a teaspoonful of sugar. Put the tomatoes, onions, salt, pepper, paprika and sugar in the water or stock to boil twenty minutes. Strain, add to the milk, which should be boiling in the top of a double boiler. Add the butter and flour, which should have been rubbed together. Boil for five minutes. Serve with four or five croutons.

Plain Tomato Soup.—Take a quart of stewed tomatoes, add a teaspoonful of hot water and rub through a sieve. Season with salt, pepper and a table spoonful of butter. When boiling add a quart of milk and thicken with cornstarch to the consistency of this cream. Serve with hot, crisp crackers.

Heart to Heart Talks.

A CRITIC FROM MARS.

Suppose—Suppose a friendly critic from the planet Mars should some day drop down on us?

What would he say? I fancy he would criticize our extravagance and waste.

Listening to our complaints about the high cost of living, he would point to our clumsy methods of distribution, our middlemen's profit, our demands for quick delivery.

Noting how our big factories utilize the byproducts and make fortunes out of waste, he would be amazed at the way our common people squander our substance.

And our impatience:

He would note our way of passing snap judgment. We prejudice things. We become excited about trifles and overlook the weightier issues.

Our changeable moods:

This Martian critic would witness how calmly we permit abuses by our political favorites; how when we wake up to them there is much excitement; how when the abuses are partially corrected we go to sleep again. Our reforms must go in waves or not at all.

Our craze for entertainment:

The Martian would watch the stream of people as they crowd into the vaudeville and picture shows. Entering into these and the other places of amusement, he would show us how the spectacular things appeal to our love of sensationalism.

Our singular cruelty:

He would wonder at our disposition to kick the man who is down, our contempt for the man who falls. He would be puzzled to understand how a humanitarian age, boasting its churches and schools, should be so disposed.

Our standard of success:

Very soon he would discover the fact that our standard of success is the dollar. It would take him a long time to figure out why we should lay the emphasis on property rights rather than human rights.

Suppose—

Suppose this critic from another world should, in the very kindest and most sympathetic way, call our attention to these defects in our civilization.

Would he be characterized as a brutal butler?

Just as I may be characterized for supposing such criticisms?

W. E. HARDING at Nineteen.
What a man soweth that shall he also reap.

Hear the Willow Valley Evangelist

We desire to announce to the public the coming of Evangelist U. E. Harding, who will conduct revival services, at the Nazarene church, beginning Nov. 8th.

Rev. Harding is no longer a diamond in the rough, but was some years ago dug from the mine of iniquity and sin and polished by the power of Christ.

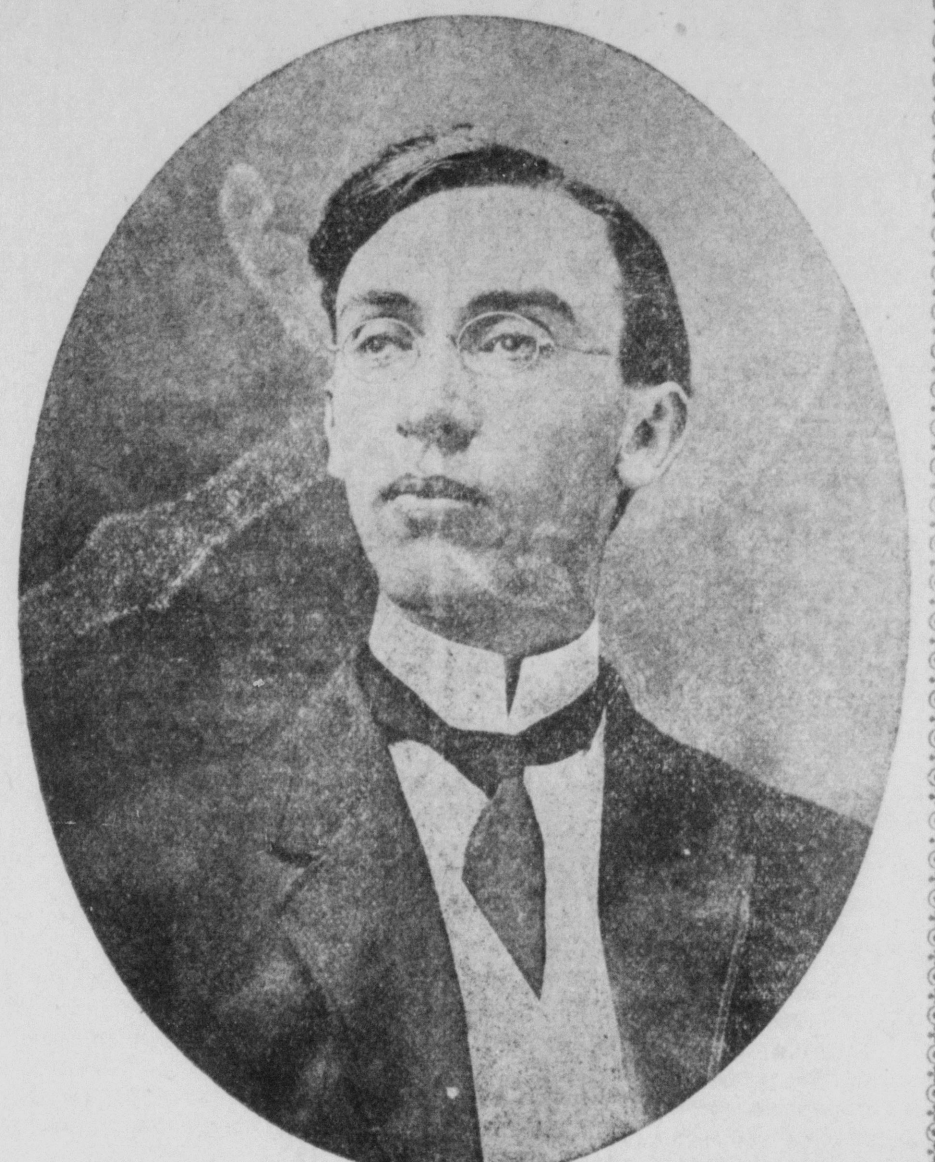

To know his former life and see him as he is today, should convince men of a power superior to that of man. His picture indicates that a change has been wrought in his life. Rev. Harding is a Hoosier by birth. He was born and raised in the hills of Martin County, Ind. His location would be better known by some, as the Willow Valley. Some might say, "Can any good thing come out of the Willow Valley?" Our answer is, yes. We have a product of this valley, which God has plucked, who has surprised many. His book entitled, "Is the Young Man Safe?" is one of interest and should be read by all of our parents who are raising boys.

These meetings are being held for the careless, indifferent, unconcerned people of our city, whether rich or poor, educated or uneducated. God has no two standards but commands all classes everywhere to repent, confess and forsake sin and follow Him.

We are not conducting these meetings to fill up time and say we had a special meeting, but we mean by the help and grace of God to rescue some helpless, hopeless souls, who today feel perhaps, they are beyond redemption. Thank God, the Gospel of Jesus has hope in it for every one, because He says, "Whosoever will may come and drink of the water of life freely."

We say it to all, come and hear the Willow Valley Evangelist.

REV. W. E. HARDING at Twenty-eight.

This poor man cried and the Lord heard him and delivered him out of all his trouble.
